MEETING THE WOUNDED.

Salvationists at Work.

Brigadier Mary Murray, of the Salvation Army, with whom are Staff-Captain John Aspinall and Captain May Whitaker, has sent a description of the operations of her party among the troops on the Continent. Miss Murray, who is the daughter of the late Lieut.-Gen. Sir John Murray, came to India, served with the Salvation Army during the Boer War. She writes:—It is difficult to describe to those who are not out here the extraordinary circumstances under which we are trying to work. First of all, apart from trains carrying wounded, only such trains run as carry troops, and perhaps once a day a "mixed" train. On an out-of-the-way siding, far away from anywhere, I counted as many as 300 wounded, evidently placed there to avoid capture, as many were Belgian.

"KEEPING IN TOUCH."

Let me explain what keeping in touch with troops means. You hear they are at French troops, reservists, wounded, perhaps taking a journey of two days to cover one of eight hours in peace time, you reach your destination to find the place packed with men, delighted to see you. "Good old Army!" "I have often heard of you." "Will you write to my wife?" "I remember South Africa" are among the cries that greet you. This may last for some days, and then the train is empty of khaki-clad figures as if they had never existed, and off we go. The nearest you get to the front is the greater the difficulties for lines are cut and bridges destroyed, so that you may, unless you are very sharp, find yourself absolutely isolated in some town miles from anywhere.

HEAD FOR THE ARMY.

Meeting troop trains sounds easy, but it is by no means so. Yesterday the staff-captain and the captain saw one carrying a Royal Horse Artillery battery. As it moved very slowly they threw in chocolate. The men, tired, catching sight of the uniform, shouted, "Salvation Army, give us bread." With lightning speed the staff-captain cleared a little baker's shop, then rushed away, grabbed what rolls he could from a restaurant, tore back, and threw them to the men. One long roll fell short, but a soldier jumped from the train, captured it, and caught the train amidst shouts and cheers. In addition to visiting hospitals, we have met the trains bringing down the wounded. These men are mostly brought down in the night, and it is a piteous sight, day after day, to see hundreds of men brought from the front, wearing field dressings, many grievously hurt, but all determined to make the best of things. Those who suffer too much on the journey are taken out and left at stationary hospitals. Capt. May Whitaker, who is accompanying Brigadier Murray, also writes: "The closed trucks filled with wounded make our hearts ache as we go from one to the other. The brigadier takes down addresses of relatives and we distribute milk food of all descriptions, boiling water, etc. We hear many tales of horror. 'Out of their poverty' for the inhabitants of the town are very poor, some of them so short of food that they have come down to eating their dogs—the people give their dogs, fowls, etc., for 'Le Croix Rouge,' and the women in the market-place call us as we go on our way to the train to give us what they can to help make the tedious journey a little more comfortable for the suffering and wounded."

An interesting feature of the ten miles race promoted by the Road Walking Association on September 26, was that the third prize was won by a man just rejected by the military authorities. The athlete in question is W. C. Simons, who walked ten miles in 1 hour 27 mins. 21 secs., which is not bad going for a novice. There cannot be much the matter with a man who can do this, and the incident makes one wonder if the regulations are more severe than they need be. The encouragement of walking is a wise move, and any young athlete who can walk ten miles on the road inside 1 hour 30 mins., ought to render a good account of himself in a forced march. The military authorities have long recognized the value of cross-country running as an aid to military training, and it is interesting to note that the Scottish Territorials are holding weekly runs which count as parades. G. Mackenzie, a Scotch Territorial, was in charge of a big party which ran over a five miles course near Glasgow on September 26. Scout Brockie, an old Watson's College boy, being the first to finish.

A FAVORITE RUB DOWN.

The golfer, the football player, and the all-round athlete know the value of Chamberlain's Pain Balm. It is just the thing for a rub down after a hard game. All soreness, dispirits, like muscle, and sprains and swellings are cured in one third less time than by any other treatment. For sale by all Chemists and Storekeepers.

A Natural
Remedy

Time was when disease was thought to be due to the direct influence of evil spirits, and exorcism and magic were invoked to cast it out.

Science has taught us wisdom. The evil spirits exist still. We call them "Disease Germs," and they also must be cast out. Once lodged in the stomach or intestines, fever with its hallucinations, or biliousness with its aches and pains, is the result.

ENO'S
FRUIT SALT

is the approved remedy for driving out disease germs. Its action is quick and thorough. It clears the intestines, restores the torpid liver to new life, stimulates the mucous membrane to a healthy action, and cleanses and invigorates the whole digestive tract.

It may be safely taken at any time by young or old.

It is very effective in the early stage of Diarrhoea by removing the irritating cause.

Be prepared for emergencies by always keeping a bottle in the house.

Prepared only by

WAR NEWS.

It transpires that when President Poincaré's visit to General Joffre was arranged, the Germans sent one of their best aviators to endeavour to drop a bomb on the two Frenchmen.

The London Scottish all volunteered for active service and only 5 per cent. were rejected after medical examination.

It transpires that the Germans made arrangements with a leading cinematograph firm to take a gigantic film recording the Kaiser's triumphal entry into Paris, but the retreat of the German army from the Marne disorganised the scene.

Newspapers in France have reported the death of Prince Adolphus, the German Emperor's third son. It is declared that Dr. Lippig, King Albert's surgeon, conducted the autopsy with two German doctors, and found that the Prince had been killed by a German bullet, as had been previously proved in the case of several German officers.

The New York World in an editorial article praises in the highest terms the absolute fairness and cleanliness of all of Sir John French's statements from the war zone. "His reports," says the journal, were simply and clearly written, and that they strongly convey the impression of absolute reliability. They will form the backbone of the history of British participation in the war which will presently be written."

Messrs. Chancery, of Richmond, have arranged for the War Office to take over the world-famous Star and Garter Hotel, which adjoins Richmond Park, for Army purposes. It will be occupied very shortly by from 1,500 to 2,000 men of the Army Service Corps.

British officers, who are prisoners in Germany, have conveyed the news that they are alive by giving cheques for small amounts to the German Red Cross fund.
By means of these cheques English bankers have traced 67 officers.

The little West African Colony and Protectorate of Gambia, which has a population of only 145,000, almost all being negroes, has undertaken to provide £100,000 as a contribution to the National Relief Fund.

According to news from Vienna, the doctors are urging the Emperor Francis Joseph to spare himself and not to visit the wounded in the hospitals, fearing that the emotion might have harmful effects.
He was much fatigued after a visit to the hospital of the Red Cross, when he insisted on seeing each wounded man and on speaking to each in his respective language—German, Hungarian, Polish, Slovak, Italian, and so on. He also conferred with Sister Michalis, who is the Archduchess's nurse, Theresa, and other ladies of the institution.

A Civil and Military Gazette cablegram says that H. M. S. Hawke, when struck by a torpedo, had almost stopped to investigate the character of a collision with the Norwegian steamer. When she was struck the collar made off. The survivors in a cutter, chilled and half-drowned, saw a periscope close at hand and rowed towards it, hoping to smash it with their oars and iron tiller, but the submarine disappeared.

HOW THE INDIAN TROOPS FOUGHT.

LONDON, Nov. 5.

The Press Bureau says the Indian troops have now commenced to participate in the operations of the British expeditionary force. One of the first engaged regiments to go into action was heavily shelled while entrenching. An officer who was present particularly noticed the men's indifference throughout the novel experience. It was noticed that they hardly troubled to look round after the first few shells. An opportunity was later afforded them of showing their gallantry in attack. A certain village possessed tactical importance and the task of storming it was assigned among others to the Indians. They advanced in circumstances of the greatest novelty and difficulty under a heavy machine gun fire with a dash and resolution worthy of the highest traditions of the army. The Indian corps commander has received a message from Field Marshal Sir John French congratulating the corps and expressing his gratitude.

PORTUGAL ON THE BRINK.

German Troopers Shot In West Africa.

London, October 30.

Laurence Marques, official German cavalry, consisting of twelve Europeans and twenty natives, crossed the southern border of Angola and arrived at a small military post. They were about to retire when a Portuguese officer grasped a German officer's bridle. German troopers raised their weapons, whereupon the Portuguese fired killing three Germans.

It so happens that one of our sergeants has a couple of highly-trained cavalrymen, which are invaluable in the field and never make a mistake in tracking "game." We took one with us last night.

The patrol soon found him working and located a lot of Uhlans in bivouac on the side of a hill. Here was a chance!

Their habit is to bar-wire a complete circle round their bivouacs, so we were allowed for that. The Count took men on the east and I had ten men on the west side.

It was 2 a.m. As usual, the men had been drinking pretty heavily, and we got near enough for our advance dismounted file to hear them snoring loudly, which helped, as we failed to disturb their sentry.

Two of our men then climbed a spreading oak tree quite near the bivouac, our party remaining well clear of the barbed wire, and fired two shots right into the centre from their revolvers. Instantly their sentry fired in the dark, aiming at nothing.

The whole party, in great disorder, scrambled to their steeds, which soon became entangled in the barbed, and we closed round and had a hand-to-hand scrimmage which sobered the Uhlans, but not before ten out of the thirty had been bitten: the dust and twelve had been wounded.

THE INDIAN TRIUMPH

London, Nov. 7.

A brilliant combined attack on the part of the Moroccans, French colonials and Indians secured Kolliebek and Mossines, important strategic points. The Indians and Africans have been confronted with a counter-attack in hopes that the complete battalion of Wurmburgers was driven into the muddy Lys and surrendered, as otherwise they would have been engulfed.
It is estimated that the Germans lost three thousand killed and wounded.

NAVAL GUNNERY.

Effective Fire on German Batteries.

London, October 30.

The Admiralty announces that a flotilla continues to support the allies' left. Since the 27th the fire of 12-inch guns which has been brought to bear on the German position and batteries has been effective, accurate and galling. The enemy brought up heavy guns and replied vigorously but the shore fire has now practically ceased.

The preponderance of the naval gunnery is established. Casualties throughout have been slight. One of the enemy's shells exploded on a destroyer, killing one officer and eight men and wounding one officer and fifteen men. One was killed and several were wounded on another destroyer. The enemy's submarines are also trying to attack the bombarding flotilla, which is covered by destroyers.

A UHLAN HUNT IN FRANCE.

TRACKING THE GERMANS WITH COCKER SPANIELS.

British Officer's Story of a Night Adventure.

A British officer who is serving with the French forces describes in the letter reproduced below several interesting incidents of the warfare in that region.

We are having a terrible fight in this city by the Krupp howitzers, and damage had been done to life and limb and property regardless altogether of Red Cross or churches.

There have been some fine scenes of devotion and heroism of men and doctors tending the wounded when the shells were pounding through roof and wall, scattering lath and plaster and stones far and wide, and almost suffocating with dust those who escaped with their lives.

One of the sisters of mercy, with a deep flesh wound in her arm, would not let go of a poor dying emigrant who was supporting with her right arm, and made the doctor blind up her wound whilst she gallantly remained at the bedside of her charge.

A priest who had just left the hospital after administering extreme unction to three infantry men, was killed in the vicinity of his church as he was putting on his coat just before Mass. So you see we have non-combatants in more peril than those actually fighting.

Count —, who, although an Italian officer, is fighting with our brigade, is a splendid horseman and full of pluck and daring. We were out together last Monday on the road to — with a party of twenty French cavalry doing a rather difficult job.

It so happens that one of our sergeants has a couple of highly-trained
cavalrymen, which are invaluable in the field and never make a mistake in
tracking "game." We took one with us last night.

The patrol soon found him working
and located a lot of Uhlans in bivouac
chance!

Their habit is to bar-wire a complete circle round their bivouacs, so we
the west side.

It was 2 a.m. As usual, the men
had been drinking pretty heavily, and
we got near enough for our advance dis-
mounted file to hear them snoring loudly,
their sentry.

been doing for years? Certainly not. He, like all Prussians and most Germans, apparently suffers from what is vulgarly known as "swelled-head"—a disease he contracted shortly after the Franco-German war. Poor Germany is a splendid example of the truth of the aphorism that "Pride goeth before a fall."

MISSIONARY ACTIVITY.

Following on the Diocesan Synod held last week, at which from 40 to 50 were present, representing Native Churches in South China, the annual Conference of the N. S. missionaries has been held during the last few days and the presidency of the Rt. Rev. the Bishop of Victoria.

Sitting was held on Monday, Tuesday and Thursday, at which the work of the past year and plans for the future were brought under review and discussed. During the year past the work has been very successful, and the missionaries have been very active in their work. The Bishop of Victoria, who was present, gave a most interesting address, in which he emphasized the importance of the work of the missionaries in the East.

On Wednesday, at the invitation of the Bishop of Victoria, a "Quiet Day" was held at St. Paul's College. In the morning there was a celebration of Holy Communion, and at one of the services the Bishop gave three devotional addresses. In the afternoon reports were given by various members of the missionary staff of their work and interesting information was given of progress in the field of mission work.

1.45 p.m. Mr. A. H. Ferguson or Mr. J. Clark v. Mr. Dowell or Mr. Crow or Rev. Tichborne.

Present form would point to the meeting of Captain Campbell and Lieut. Gardner in the Fourth Round, and this should be a match worth watching, as both men are golfers of a very high order.

On paper form it would appear that Mr. Cumming would emerge successful from the battle with the green, as in all probability the final will be an interesting one.

We understand that Captain Campbell and Lieut. Gardner met in the final of the Championship of Northern India some years ago, and the former proving successful, the latter being in an apparently hopeless position. Lieut. Gardner being 6 or 8 up with only a little more than that number of holes to play.

SCOTTISH LETTER.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

EDINBURGH, October 15.

THE WAR AND SCOTLAND.

People who have been on the Continent say that on their return to this country they received a shock when they saw us enjoying our lives as usual and indulging in our pleasures as usual. It seemed to them that there was something wrong, almost sinful in our attitude, when they remembered that the rest of Europe was plunged in the anxieties and sorrows of war. After a little, however, they had to confess that this carelessness was merely the surface. Below it was a deep and tense feeling that was clouded by an appearance of indifference. In Scotland, at any rate, the striving towards "as usual" only applies to business, and then only to the business that deal with the necessities. All else is at a standstill. Most of our social and public engagements are abandoned. There is almost no entertaining in any circle of the community, gentle or simple. At a time when some are brothers and other relatives are on the battle-field, or training in the camps it would be impossible to carry on the customary gaieties. And almost every little circle or family is in mourning for one of its members. In the coming season there will be no public dinners, no dances, and practically no "at homes" except those connected with relief organisations. The modest social and conversational, and soirees of the working classes will also be postponed. Theatres are empty as a rule, and music halls are having bad times; the most amusement that a large section of the public have themselves is an occasional visit to a picture-house, there to witness a pictorial representation of war and its horrors. The patrons of Association football are still the younger men make future approaches to League footballers almost numbers.

In many week-ends it is not considered good form to attend matches. Club directors are resigning as a protest against a continuance of play at the present crisis. Even keen devotees of golf have fled the courses. It is recorded of one eager follower of that amazing game that he has sold his "sticks" for the benefit of the National Fund. Of 20 years it has been since he has been on a golf course, and he has become a pleasure-loving people, the long peace and the increasing material prosperity had softened our higher qualities, and no doubt there was some truth in the charges. But this curbing of the desire for social entertainment, this air of mourning, are signs that we are not altogether lost to grace, and that the war may not be an altogether evil thing if it leads us to a more to the higher ideals of national life, and reminds us of our duties to the Empire and to the free life of the world.

THE DEER FORESTS.

The Scottish deer stalking season now being brought to a close has been strikingly influenced by the war. Many tenants and owners did not journey North at all, and in a few of the forests stalking was entrusted to the stalkers and gillies of the neighbourhood. At Balmoral, for instance, no member of the Royal Family has been in residence, and the great forest of Mar has been given over to the stalkers. The stags thus shot have been beards with inferior heads, but with good haunches, for many of them are now being distributed among the wounded in various parts of the country. The war has called away from the glens many of the kilted men. Numbers of the stalkers, it is true, have reached an age at which their services are not required by the country, but not a few have gone to the front. The gillies, the stalkers, and the younger class of men, have left the forests almost to a man, and are now with the colours in various parts.

Not many days ago, writes Mr. Soton Gordon, the well known Scottish naturalist, I traversed a deep glen in the heart of the Cairngorms. The hills are high and not far from the glen is the corrie of the Etna Snows. In the glen is a small shilling where, during the months of summer and autumn, a solitary watcher has his home. But as I passed no smoke came from the fire, nor was there a single chimney, nor could the watcher be seen spying in the glen. From a neighbouring stalker I heard that the inmate of the bothy had left his isolated habitation and was now in active training with the Gordon Highlanders in the Midlands of England. One could imagine no more striking or dramatic change from the great stillness of a most remote glen than the hurry and duties of strenuous active service.

CAPTURING GERMAN TREASURES.

Perhaps nowhere has the fabric of trade been so much shaken as in Scotland, and particularly in the looms of Central and Western areas. After the crash men found their feet quickly. Looking around they made sure that no more damage had been done than a few cracks and broken windows. The walls and the machinery were unharmed. To leave the figures in large measure intact so some forms of industry should suffer seriously, but distinct impetus was given in other directions, and the general situation may be regarded as much more satisfactory than the community had any reason to expect. In large measure confidence is being consolidated, and although it is still a long way to the restoration of the normal, and although there must yet be many anxious weeks and embarrassing problems to face, the facts do give the simplest justification for the confidence of all possible energy for the capture of such markets as may be occupied with profit. The qualification, such "as may be" is to be feared that we shall have to face a tendency to relaxation in enterprise and speculation. Already there are ominous signs of this in the industrial campaign for the seizure of German trade. There are some sections of the enemy's commerce that ought to be allowed to float wherever the tide may carry it, these could do little for us except absorb capital and swell deficits. Much of the trade will certainly pass to the United States, but a great share must remain as our legitimate prize.

CANADIAN INDUSTRY UNDAUNED.

As might be expected from the large share that Scotland has taken in the war, the Canadian element in the Dominion is not less active in the struggle.
